ABOUT HOWARD

Founded at Marion, Alabama, in 1842, Howard is the largest privately supported and fully accredited four-year co-educational college in Alabama. The college moved to the East Lake campus in Birmingham in 1887 and in 1957 moved to its present 400-acre campus in the beautiful Shades Valley section of greater Birmingham. Howard, a Baptist institution, is expanding to fill the needs of a quality education in the nation's future.

DR. LESLIE S. WRIGHT

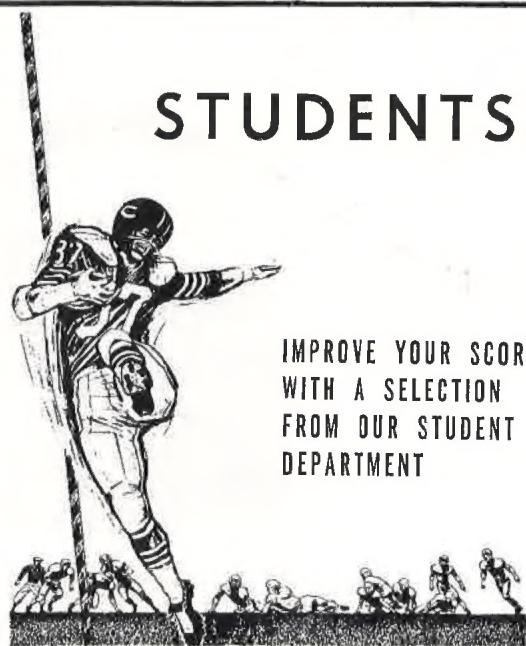

President

I firmly believe in college athletics as an influence for good on a college campus. There are good reasons for having an intercollegiate athletic program as an integral part of campus life. The benefits to the individual are many. There are few better methods of teaching a young man the value of effort and of trying to do one's best at whatever task is assigned. He learns what real competition is. He discovers the rewards of contributing to a team effort. In winning and losing he gains an understanding of life itself. He takes the bumps and bruises and he has his fun. These are values which have been discounted by the cynic, but they are real and they are worthwhile.

A worthy athletic program unites the student body, the alumni and the public. It generates a spirit that envelopes the entire campus and community. For many people athletics provide the main point of contact with the college. Intercollegiate competition can develop pride in an institution in a way that few other activities can or do. An athletic program provides a constructive outlet for the tremendous enthusiasm forever building up in college students.

We are proud of our athletic program at Howard and it shall be our steadfast purpose to keep athletics in proper perspective to the total program of the college. In this manner athletics can continue to serve a useful and constructive purpose.

Coach Sharman started his eighth year in his present position and his 11th on the Howard College physical education staff in September. He became a member in 1951 after a wide background in athletics and physical education. He was a blocking back on Howard's fine pre-war football teams, served as a Navy physical training officer at Pearl Harbor during World War II, coached five years in Alabama high schools and taught one year at George Peabody College. He was graduated from Howard in 1943, and later received his Master's Degree from Peabody.

Coach Sharman feels that an athletic program provides many values to a college. "One is the color and school spirit it gives to a campus," he said. "But the most important, I believe, are those that the boys who take part in a program receive."

"Strength, power and agility are developed. The athlete learns to make decisions quickly and to think under pressure. Physical and emotional training a boy receives does much to build strong character for other areas of life."

"The program at Howard serves as a laboratory for training coaches and teachers. A great number of the high school coaches in Alabama, especially in Jefferson County, are Howard-trained."

What does the future hold for Howard athletics?

"There will always be a place for athletics on the Howard campus. The facilities for such a program here are among the best in the South."

"Howard's athletic program has developed rapidly during the past few years. And Howard plans to continue playing teams of its own class. But there is no desire for Howard to become a major athletic power."

"The administration of Howard College plans a continuance of the athletic program as an integral part of the total education program."

In addition to heading the physical education department and serving as athletic director, Sharman coaches the varsity tennis team. His net squads have been recognized as among the best in the South. They were unbeaten by Alabama teams from 1954 until last Spring, when University of Alabama netters broke the string.

Sharman and his wife, the former Frances Duke of Birmingham, have five children—Cathy, 14; Mike, 12; Carol, 7; Betty Sue, 5 and Donald Edward, born last July.

COACH BOBBY BOWDEN

Howard's congenial young coach has established quite a record (24-4) since he returned to his Alma Mater three years ago. This record accounts for his devotedness to coaching, not only in the Fall, but the year-around. He is a master at handling his players, on and off the field, and is highly respected by all.

His football philosophy—“Coach Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers expressed my philosophy best when he said, ‘Football is two things, blocking and tackling. I don’t care about fancy formations or new offenses and defenses stunts, if you block and tackle better than the team you are playing, you’ll win.’”

College football—“One of my favorite quotes on the value of football in our schools is that football is one of the last bastions of discipline in our American society today. This discipline is a great need in a Democratic, God-fearing nation that is supposed to be setting an example for other democracies.”

Most difficulty in coaching—“I think trying to look after the welfare of fifty or more boys each year is the most difficulty in coaching. Other teachers do not have to worry about where their students eat or sleep or whether or not they have a bad cold or not, but coaches do. Also, when a teacher gives a test, she and her students are the only ones who know whether or not she is doing a good job of getting the message across. When I give a test, each Saturday there are 6,000 people out there watching, criticizing and second guessing every move.”

Hobby—“Golf, but you can’t tell it by watching me play. My score is high but I do know all the words.”

Coach Bowden, as a student, was a star Howard Bulldog quarterback for four years, graduating in 1952. He received his Master’s degree at Peabody College and came back to Howard as backfield coach and head track coach.

In 1955, Coach Bowden took over as head coach of South Georgia College where he won three state championships in four years. He returned to Howard in 1959.

Coach Bowden has his own rooting section, win, lose or draw, in wife, Julia Ann; children, Robin, 11; Steve, 9; Tommy, 8; Terry, 6; Jeffery, 2; and Ginger, 11 months.

COACH VIRGIL LEDBETTER

Coach Ledbetter has served on the Howard coaching staff for the past seven years, and his leadership and coaching abilities have contributed much to the upswing in Howard athletes. The football line coach and baseball coach has always been a firm believer in athletes. He has spent most of his life either as a player or coach, which accounts for his broad knowledge in the field of athletics.

College Athletic Program—"Any athletic program is dependent upon four factors: The desires of the president of the school; the leadership of the athletic director; the wishes of the faculty of the institution; and the efficiency of the coaching staff. The kind of team that represents the institution is a result of these four factors. If one judges the success of the team on its won or lost basis, it is easy to overlook these important reasons. Just as a chain is only as strong as the weakest link, so will the athletic program function likewise."

Most satisfaction in coaching—"The greatest satisfaction one derives from coaching is seeing the improvement of the players physically, morally, and spiritually. The only justification of hiring coaches is to improve the abilities and skills of the players. Since the attitude of the player determines his ability to live a socially accepted mode of life, the molding of the athletes into well-adjusted individuals is the reward of coaching."

Hobby—"Working in the yard, raising apples, grapes, and muscadines gives me a great deal of pleasure. The same goes for cook-outs. Trying to help boys become better ball players also gives me great satisfaction."

Coach Ledbetter began his collegiate career at Howard before entering the service in 1942. In World War II, he served in the 15th Air Force as a Navigator for three years. He then finished college at Arkansas State, where he was a four-sport athlete, as well as at Howard.

Before coming to Howard in 1955, Coach Ledbetter coached high school teams in Arkansas and Alabama. While at Howard, he has put together outstanding baseball teams and just last season notched his one-hundredth victory.

Coach Ledbetter married the former Dorothy Copple of Jonesboro, Arkansas, and they have one son, Butch, age nine.
